Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1920 edition. Excerpt: . . . bombard the Victor Talking Machine Co. with a view to their issuing more records featuring the flute-playing of our leading artists, and also more good songs in English with flute obligato. We are heartily in favor of the idea and trust there will be a generous response upon the part of our readers. Very much can be learned from such records especially when made by the very finest artists, and aside from the great value to our profession, the general public is interested far more than one would believe. The Victor Co. , and others as well, are always willing to make records to please their patrons. and once they note the interest being taken in this matter, very little time will be lost ere the records will be upon the market. In a sense, this is propaganda and as such it must be well organized to become effective. The editor believes this can be accomplished best by our subscribers writing to their favorite talking machine company and requesting a list of records by certain artists (naming the flutists whom they would like to hear). A single enquiry will avail nothing but when letters continue to pour into the office, the various companies will get busy and negotiate with the artists mentioned with a view to having records made by them. Not only will our readers be doing a good turn for our leading artists but they will be taking a forward step in...
